

The Center for Global, Regional, and International Studies (University of California, Santa Cruz) & The Center for Global Studies (George Mason University), in partnership with the Carnegie Corporation of New York present:

Globalization, State Capacity, and Muslim Movements: A Policy Forum

Monday, March 19, 10:00am-1:00pm
The Carnegie Endowment for International Peace
1779 Massachusetts Ave NW, Washington DC

Speakers

Jocelyne Cesari (Harvard University)
Juan Cole (University of Michigan)
Robert Hefner (Boston University)
Paul Lubeck (UC Santa Cruz)
Peter Mandaville (George Mason University)
Hugh Roberts (International Crisis Group)

A distinguished panel of experts will examine a range of issues relating to the consequences of economic globalization on state capacity in the Muslim world, focusing on key strategic countries in the Middle East, Europe, Southeast Asia, and Africa. Questions to be addressed include: What are the policy lessons to be learned from understanding the diverse Muslim responses to economic globalization? How have Muslim movements in various parts of the world responded to the opportunities offered by economic globalization? How does globalization figure in the politics of radical Muslim movements? What are the preconditions for the successful management of state-society relations in Muslim majority states? Is it possible to identify distinct forms of "Muslim globalization"? What are the limits to economic reform and democratization in Muslim majority states?

A light lunch will be served.

Please RSVP by Friday, March 16 to Andrea Zizack on (703) 993-9433 or azizack@gmu.edu